“ A major moment in my life, was the moment I realized what it meant to be a big brother.

Brandon couldn't been older than 2-3 years old, he would always follow me around, and I hated it....I wasn't sold on being the "middle child". One day I was trying to get away from Brandon and as I went to my room I slammed the door behind me....but Brandon had reached his hand out and his finger got caught.....I heard him scream in pain crying louder than ever before....He had to go to the hospital because I had broken his finger....

That was the worst feeling I had ever felt.....

I had caused harm to my little brother a person I should be protecting....

From that moment on Brandon's well being was my prime concern. As he grew older I was on him....I wanted him to be the best version of himself he was going to be..... From His Schoolwork to keeping him away from shady characters who may steer him down the wrong path..... to ultimately Fatherhood I wanted the best for my Brother.

As the years went on my watchful eye over him became more difficult to maintain and I had to accept that he had become his own man, and I'd pray that he's safe out there not only for him.....but for his children. If I heard he was visiting my mother I'd try to get over there to see him before he headed back to Waterbury and just like before he hung up on the Phone he let me know he loved me every time before leaving.

I want my brother's life to encourage my family to stay connected. We all have our own responsibilities and struggles to overcome daily, but we shouldn't let our bond stray due to them....

I love you Brandon and I love you family.
