“ A year later 😞 I miss you so much Dad. I was up tossing and turning all night. I'm just laying here thinking about the memories and moments we shared. There's a lot of "could've and would've" that I have and regret not taking. I hope your looking down at me proud. I love you and continue to sleep peacefully 🙏 ”

“ The owners and workers of Young Entrepreneurs Cotton Candy (YACK Cotton Candy) are saddened by the passing of Mr. Newton. He was an excellent concessions competitor and business owner. He felt that the "economic pie) was large enough for anyone who wanted to put in the effort. He enjoyed the competition and continued to improve his offering and presentation. He made incremental changes that helped improve traffic and diversified his product to complement what he offered.

YACK Cotton Candy wishes all the best to his family and the continued success of Elm City Kettle Corn.

“ I had the pleasure of working with Newton for 18 years in the pharmacy at the Hill Health Center. For all of you who knew him, you understand when I say that he was the heart of the department. He had a sense of humor that infected not only the pharmacy department, but spread to the entire health center. His humor took no prisoners.

After the pharmacy closed Newton and I stayed in touch through the years. He attended my wedding to Elizabeth. She and I were invited to significant events over these years e.g., Pat's college graduation, and 60th birthday parties. When visiting New Haven, Elizabeth and I made a point of stopping on York St for some of Newton's kettle corn.

I would be amiss if I didn't comment on Newton's achievement in creating Elm City Kettle Corn. He had the entrepreneurial spirit going back to the days of the Hill Health Center. I remember the peanut machine vending business as one example. At one time he owned rental units and tended bar. Newton had energy, ambition and that rich personality that led up to Elm City Kettle Corn, a proud achievement.

Newton's greatest achievement has to be his family. Newton and I were coworkers during those years when children were being born and family was growing and changing. Good job "Newt."

Finally, Newton and I would speak by phone every few months. I really appreciated his staying in touch; updating me about his business, Pat's work, Hill Health Center coworkers that he still ran across in New Haven. I have few close friends. I can count them on one hand. Newton was one of them. I miss you Newton.
